About the Science Behind Vitamin C
Excessive melanin production tends to accumulate in the skin, which causes it to look darker. Vitamin C helps to reduce the accumulated melanin making the skin look clearer and brighter.

The production of melanin by Melanocytes define the skin color.
(Melanocytes are the Cells that contain and produces the melanin pigment)

About the Science Behind Salicylic Acid

Acne develops when hair follicles get blocked by excess of oil, dead skin cells, and bacteria. This blockage triggers the formation of pimples and inflammation.

Salicylic Acid exfoliates skin and unclogs pores by reducing buildup of dead skin cells and sebum that cause acne. It also has anti - inflammatory properties and helps regulate sebum production.

About the Science Behind Retinol
Aging and environmental stressors slow down the skin's natural renewal process. This leads to a buildup of older skin cells, resulting in dullness, fine lines, and loss of elasticity.

Retinol is the gold standard in anti-aging. It works at a molecular level to repair the skin structure, improve elasticity, and fade hyperpigmentation. Because it increases sensitivity to light, it is best used in your nighttime routine followed by SPF the next morning.
